

Trip to Sri Lanka
Wednesday March 16, 2016
Day Six

Well my Sri Lankan tradition continued and I was up at 6 am this morning. Breakfast came early and then we headed downstairs for the Board of Administration meeting. Dan lead us through a lovely Lectio Divina on Philippians 2:1-11. Following that we did some work on discovering our Myers-Briggs types and then into the 'meat and potatoes' of the meeting. There were several items to work through, but it all got done on the one day, as opposed to two days. In all we met from 10 am to 4 pm.

Then it was time to say good bye to new friends as they all headed out for their homes — some of them 7 hours away. But, it was also a time to say hello as some other visitors showed up to see Dan. Pastor Benjamin, his wife, their niece, and one of their board members. They were a vibrant group and I was glad to prayer for them, specifically that they would be able to raise the 1.5 cror for the property they would like to purchase.

After that short visit I began to get my suitcase organized. I folded the dirty laundry to make it fit better and confirmed I didn't have any ants or a gecko traveling with me. In the morning I'll pack up the rest and be ready to go. We're going to try to do some shopping for souvenirs for the girls and then head for the airport for 7 pm — flight at 9:45 pm. Sri Lanka has been wonderful, but I am ready to get home to my girls!
