

Lamenting With God: A Reflection on Last Sunday's Sermon

At the heart of the Christian spiritual practice of Lament is covenant. God has made a covenant with his people through the blood of his Son, Jesus. It is this covenant that gives us the boldness to come before the throne of God in Lament (Hebrews 10:19).

So while proper Lament contains elements of complaint, a lament is not a complaint. Rather, Lament is a reminder from us to God of our condition and situation. We are not supposed to suffer in silence or abandon faith. We are to Lament our suffering circumstances.

And, because God has made covenant with us through Christ Jesus, he hears us and promises to respond.

Of course, Lament isn't a system designed to get our lives back to where we want them. Lament, instead, is a patient trust in God to do the best for us in accordance with his good will and purposes. This is why we need to practice, among the other fruit, the spiritual fruit of long suffering as Jesus followers.

To speak about suffering, patience, and long-suffering is too theological and easy when you're not the one suffering, so it is important to keep the practice of Lament in the context of community. Remember that before "God, Let's Talk," we had a sermon called "Suffering and Presence." The Jesus-community is necessary to our ability to truly Lament.
