

Fixing Our Eyes: A Reflection on Last Week's Sermon

We live in such a media-saturated time and place that it can be hard for us to realize how much what we take in with our eyes shapes us. Perhaps that's why the old children's song said, "Be careful little eyes what you see!"

On the other hand, we are also keenly aware that visual aids are important for setting and reaching our goals. Some people who are intent on living a life of luxury will put up pictures of cars, boats, houses, etc., to motivate them to keep working on that goal.

The author of Hebrews is perhaps the most helpful in this area, knowing the human connection between sight and desire, they say, "let us run with perseverance the race marked out for us, fixing our eyes on Jesus."

The perfection and fulfillment of our faith cannot be merely one goal among many. Either we are running toward our eternal home, or we are falling away. If our eyes are not fixed on Jesus, then they are fixed on the world. Implied in the verse he is saying that we will obtain what we fix our eyes upon.

Of course, this is the context for reading our passage from last week: that God disciplines his children. This is not simply a general statement; it is a reminder that God is actively and lovingly concerned for us to reach full adoption. Therefore, he participates to bring us home. He keeps us on track, focused on him.
